The Man Who Skied Down Everest This incredible, award-winning adventure film features adventurer, poet and world-champion skier Yuichiro Miura as he and his team face the most challenging climb in the world, Mt. Everest. The ascent is fraught with tragedy, the descent miraculous. During the climb, they face an icefall that claims the lives of six of their team, still considered the worst natural disaster accident in Himalayan history. With a 35 mm Panavision film crew in tow, they continue on to the South Col., only 350 meters from the summit, where Muira puts his life in the hands of the gods. Using oxygen and a parachute to slow his speed, Miura skied 7,000 feet over sheer ice and rocks. Unbalanced by the gusting winds, he hit a boulder and fell 1,320 feet, smashing into rocks and ice ridges. A patch of snow was all that saved him, allowing his fall to end just moments away from the Bergshrunn Crevasse. This final climax has been called the most exciting six minutes of film ever shot as Miura plummets helplessly down Everest's unforgiving icy slopes toward certain death. Possibly the first truly extreme skiing film ever produced, The Man Who Skied Down Everest Is a portrait of an athlete and a world record-holder, a timeless story of courage and one man's dream to do the impossible.
