Rio A misfit macaw named Blu (voice of Jesse Eisenberg) heads to Rio de Janeiro, embarks on a magnificent journey, and makes some loyal new friends in this animated adventure for the entire family. Domesticated from the time he was just a hatchling, Blu traded a life in the clouds for a contented existence in Moose Lake with his doting owner, Linda (Leslie Mann). They live under the impression that Blu is the last of his kind, but upon receiving word that a female macaw named Jewel (Anne Hathaway) has been discovered in Rio de Janeiro, Linda and Blu set their sights on South America on a mission to replenish the species. Shortly after their arrival in the Brazilian capitol, however, the two rare birds fall victim to a gang of greedy animal smugglers intent on making a mint by selling Blu and Jewel to the highest bidder. But the headstrong Jewel isn't about to be locked in a cage and put on display, so when the opportunity arises she stages a daring escape with the help of some wisecracking local birds, and takes her new friend Blu along for the ride. With the bumbling birdnappers fast closing in, Blu realizes that his only hope for making a clean getaway and reuniting with Linda is to finally summon the courage he needs to take flight. RIO also features the voices of Tracy Morgan, Jamie Foxx, George Lopez, and will.i.am. Fox

Quarantine 2: Terminal A red-eye flight from LAX to Nashville takes a terrifying turn of events when the passengers become infected with a highly contagious virus, and find themselves quarantined in an airport following an emergency landing. Picking up immediately after the events depicted in Quarantine, this relentlessly tense sequel finds the passengers of Flight 318 ascending into the clouds as reports of a sequestered L.A. apartment building begin filtering through the nightly news. Shortly thereafter, the passengers on the flight begin to exhibit disturbing rabies-like symptoms, forcing the pilots to make an emergency landing at an isolated terminal in a large metropolitan airport. As the group hastily departs the plane, terrified flight attendant Jenny (Mercedes Masohn) bravely attempts to lead them to safety. But when a squad of police officers and emergency workers arrive on the scene accompanied by the CDC, the passengers' relief turns to horror as they realize they have been quarantined, with no hope of escape. Now, their only chance of living through this nightmare without getting infected by the virus or shot down while fleeing rests in the hands of Jenny and resourceful kindergarten teacher Henry (Josh Cooke), who try to remain calm long enough to formulate a viable escape plan. Sony

Dexter Season 5 Mild-mannered Dexter Morgan (Golden Globe winner Michael C. Hall) works for the Miami Metro Police Department as a blood-splatter analyst -- and moonlights as a murderer who only targets other killers, a moral code instilled in him by his adoptive father, Harry (James Remar). As Dexter channels his sociopathic urges into acts of vigilantism, his co-workers, friends and family remain blissfully unaware of his bloodthirsty alter ego. Season 5 of this thrilling drama series welcomes Julia Stiles as a woman who has a connection to Dexter's secret, and Peter Weller as a troubled Miami cop involved in an internal affairs investigation. Showtime

Baby Jane One of the campiest thrillers of the 1960s just got a whole lot campier in this witty take-off starring a cast of drag queens. Jane Hudson (Matthew Martin) was a child star in vaudeville who fell out of favor as she grew older, while her sister Blanche (J. Conrad Frank) went on to eclipse Jane's fame as a motion picture actress until a mysterious auto accident left her confined to a wheelchair, ending her career. Years later, Jane and Blanche are living together in a decaying Hollywood mansion, with Jane serving as her sister's caretaker. However, Jane has gone quite flamboyantly insane, and takes delight in punishing her more talented and successful sibling. As Jane gets battier by the day and Blanche tries to find a way to break free of her sister's clutches, a pair of neighbors (Heklina and Ron Herman Symansky) spy on the house without getting a very clear idea of what's really going on. Ariztical

Little Big Soldier Two rivals strike up a wary friendship in this blend of historical drama, action and comedy starring international martial arts star Jackie Chan. It's 227 B.C., and during the era of the warring states, a fifty-something Liang soldier (Jackie Chan) captures a wounded Wei general (Wang Leehom) in the wake of a battle. The soldier's goal in taking the general prisoner isn't glory but the hope of collecting a reward so he can buy some land and start a farm once then fighting is over. The general, however, is vain and arrogant and insists he was taken captive only after his own men turned against them. As the two men slowly make their way back to Liang territory, they're followed by a duplicitous Wei prince (Steve Yoo) who has his own reasons for wanting the general back, as well as villains and scoundrels on both sides. While the soldier and the general don't get along at first, in time a grudging admiration grows between them as the general comes to appreciate the decency and good nature of his captor. Well Go USA

The Grace Card This earnest evangelical drama draws inspiration from the Bible verse Hebrews 4:16 ("We will find grace to help us when we need it") in its tale of a police officer named Bill "Mac" McDonald (Michael Joiner) whose life is shattered (and his faith severely challenged) when he loses his son in a tragic accident. Eighteen years of rage and hostility ensue, marked by rapidly crumbling relationships with his family members and strained relationships on the force. Events reach a fever pitch, however, when Mac gets partnered up in the squad car with Sam Wright (Michael Higgenbottom), an African-American ordained minister-turned-cop with a loving and supportive family. Despite the many obstacles standing in the way, the men gradually work toward overcoming their differences and helping one another. Sony

The Dead and the Damned It's Clint Eastwood meets George Romero as undead, flesh-eating gunslingers roam the Wild West. When a group of miners unearth a dangerous meteorite, they inadvertently unleash an intergalactic plague that ravishes the town and turns the population into blood-thirsty mutants. Inception

American Bully A morbid prank spirals into tragedy in this chilling drama concerning seven teenagers who fall under the reprehensible spell of violence. In the wake of viewing a gruesome internet video featuring a graphic beheading, something snaps inside of troubled teen Brandon. Later, Matt's obsession with the video leads to a shocking transgression against a fellow classmate that will shock a nation already reeling from the 9/11 terrorist attacks. Natasha Henstridge and John Savage co-star. Green Apple

Citizen Jane When she learns that her closest friend and lover, Tom O'Donnell, is the chief suspect in the brutal slaying of a dear relative, ordinary citizen Jane Alexander (Ally Sheedy) will stop at nothing to track him down and discover the truth. But as she closes in on her quarry, she realizes that she might be next on the murderer's hit list. Armand Mastroianni directs and rocker Meat Loaf co-stars in this drama based on a true story. Green Apple
