Dynasty - Third Season Epitomizing the glamour and decadence of 1980s Reagan-era America, Dynasty was essentially a prime-time soap opera, and was characterized by campy, melodramatic plotlines, as well as Joan Collins's magnetic performance as the conniving Alexis Colby. She is divorced from Blake Carrington (John Forsythe), a fabulously wealthy oil magnate who marries his secretary, Krystle Jennings (Linda Evans), at the show's inception; the jealous Alexis schemes to do everything she can to destroy their union. The rest of the cast includes Blake and Alexis's children--the promiscuous amnesiac Fallon and the sexually ambivalent Steven--as well as resident geologist Matthew Blaisdel and his psychotic wife, Claudia. The war between the Colby and Carrington clans heats up in the glossy nighttime sudser's third season. CSI: Season 8 A smash hit from the moment of its 2000 debut, CSI: Crime Scene Investigation remains one of the most popular, innovative, and critically acclaimed crime dramas in television history. Created by Anthony Zuiker and executive produced by movie maven Jerry Bruckheimer, the thrilling series centers on the Las Vegas Police Department's night-shift forensics unit, which utilizes cutting-edge technology to solve the often grisly crimes of a glamorous city whose constant influx of visitors makes it rife with criminal elements. Quick-witted detective Gil Grissom (William Buntz) leads the highly skilled investigative team that includes his single-mother partner, Catherine Willows (Marg Helgenberger); hair and fiber expert Nick Stokes (George Eads); former gambling addict Warrick Brown (Gary Dourdan); and fresh-faced newbie Sara Sidle (Jorja Fox), with the help of a tough-as-nails police captain, Jim Brass (Paul Guilfoyle), and an efficient lab coroner, Dr. Al Robbins (Robert David Hall). Heavy on science, creative camera work, and uncomfortably graphic depictions of violence, CSI is praised by fans and critics alike for its consistently gripping and well-written storylines, often inspired by real-life cases. Mission: Impossible 5th Season The Impossible Mission Force head to the homefront in season five of Mission: Impossible. While previous seasons pitted these Cold War warriors against international goons, the show's later seasons increasingly found the crack squad of saboteurs using their gadgets and cunning to foil more native threats: drug cartels hooking Americans on dope and mobsters using their collective power to evade justice. The result is more time spent by Jim (Peter Graves), Barney (Greg Morris), Willy (Peter Lupus), and Paris (Leonard Nimoy) in the good old U.S.A. stanching the flow of drugs and busting the Syndicate, bit by bit. All through their daredevil adventures, the team's skills still prove razor-sharp--especially with the help of a foxy new member, Dana Lambert (Lesley Ann Warren). Triple Feature Revenge is Sweet: Candyman, The Fog, Terror Train Ghouls, ghosts, and spiteful nerds who were wronged in the past exact revenge on the hedonistic, the innocent, and pretty much anybody they can get their hands on in this spine-tingling collection. Candyman Helen Lyle is writing a thesis on Candyman, a supposedly mythical killer who attacks his victims with a hooked hand when they say his name in front of a mirror. During her research, she meets up with the killer, who wants her to join him in his "mythic" world; when she refuses, he murders those in her wake, leaving her to be charged with the crimes. She tries to explain who the real culprit is, but her efforts fail, and authorities commit her to a mental hospital. Desperate to prove her sanity, she summons Candyman, who comes and helps her escape. But he has more murderous impulses to quell, and still wants her to join him in his parallel life. The Fog Director John Carpenter creates an old-fashioned campfire ghost story with The Fog. Antonio Bay, a quaint, small seaside town is celebrating the 100th anniversary of its founding. That night a heavy, mysterious fog rolls through the town and people begin to die in savage ways. Rumors of a secret as old as the town begin to surface and the people of Antonio Bay realize they are victims of long dead sailors who have come to revenge their own murders at the hands of the town's founding fathers. The townspeople can only wait for the fog to roll in and pray that they are not the next to die... Carpenter creates a chilling film with The Fog and gets fine performances out of Adrienne Barbeau, Hal Holbrook, and the fog itself, which creeps and crawls around as if it were alive. The film elicits its scares out of what is not seen rather than what is, and Carpenter exploits that style perfectly. Vague shapes move within the fog, while strange noises heard in the distance grow louder, and no one can say exactly what they are up against. The Fog is one of Carpenter's earlier films and helped to establish his reputation as a master filmmaker. Terror Train A fraternity prank goes wrong and lands one student in a mental institution. Four years later, when his frat brothers host a costume party on a train to celebrate their graduation, the student sees this as his opportunity to exact revenge. He sneaks on the train and begins killing the partygoers one at a time, masking himself in the costumes of his victims. Will anyone make it off the train alive?. Fox

Triple Feature Don't Go In The House: This triple feature of classic haunted house tales is so spooky it actually contains four movies! That's right; hiding in its shadows is a ghostly bonus film just for fans of domestic fright. Whether it's the investigative approach of The Legend Of Hell House, the slow-burn style found in the 2005 Amityville Horror remake, or Poltergeist 2 and Poltergeist 3's more frenzied take on the subject of house-dwelling specters, these abodes are anything but home sweet home. The Amityville Horror This frightening remake of the 1979 horror classic from producer Michael Bay (The Texas Chainsaw Massacre) delves deeper into the supposedly true story of supernatural events that occurred in a Long Island, New York home in the '70s. When George and Kathy Lutz (Ryan Reynolds and Melissa George) come across a beautiful river-front colonial home being sold for a steal, they suspect a catch. Once informed that the home was the site of a grisly mass murder, they decide to buy the house anyway and eagerly move in, bringing with them Kathy's three children from a previous marriage. While no one can deny that the house is rife with spooky sounds, the family members try to put their fears at bay. But over time, strange occurrences start happening, becoming more and more frequent, and these events start to have a transformative effect on several family members. Kathy's daughter starts to act bizarrely, ending up in a variety of life-threatening situations, led by her new, not-so-imaginary friend Jody (one of the children slaughtered in the house years before by her older brother). Likewise, something strange seems to be happening to George. His usually sweet demeanor is replaced with a hostile one, and he starts cruelly taking out his aggression on Kathy's children. Kathy's original assumption that a house cannot be evil is challenged as she watches her husband transform into the sort of man that just might be capable of murdering his family. Faster-paced than the original, The Amityville Horror keeps viewers on the edge of their seats with quick editing, suspenseful music, and moderately graphic violence. The Legend of Hell House The wealthy owner of a haunted mansion believes his home (which has been dubbed "Hell House" due to a history of bizarre happenings therein) might provide the answer to the phenomenon of life after death. To prove his theory, he enlists the help of four brave psychic investigators whom, to acquire the situation in its entirety, set up residence in the dark and mysterious abode. Soon after, the team are nearly driven to insanity as they slowly begin to discover how the mansion got its gloomy moniker. Poltergeist II & III They're back! In Poltergeist II, the restless spirits of the unburied have followed the Freeling family (headed by Craig T. Nelson and JoBeth Williams) to their new home. Poltergeist III is set in a Chicago high-rise, where Carol Anne (Heather O'Rourke) is relentlessly sought by the evil Reverend Kane. Co-stars Tom Skerritt. Fox

Feast II Sloppy Seconds is a rip-roaring splatter-fest of a sequel that, much like its predecessor, proudly wears its hardcore horror nature on its sleeve. When characters with names like Biker Queen, Tat Girl, Puker, and Bartender congregate in a desolate little town in the middle of nowhere and again find themselves at odds with a clan of vicious and horny monsters, it's obvious a grand old time is in store for anyone who dares watch. Director John Gulager continues the mayhem right where the first one left off as the survivors of the bar incident make their way to the nearest small town only to realize the creatures had the same idea. This tense, darkly comic franchise simultaneously tweaks, parodies, and embraces gory traditions with twisted glee. Genius

Cusack comes in as Brand Houser, a hit man slowly growing a conscience and doubting his chosen profession. His title also requires that he make sure the wedding of a local pop singer (Hillary Duff) goes smoothly. While working alongside Marsha Dillon (Joan Cusack), Houser tries to handle and ward off advances from the over-sexualized, pint-sized pop idol. The addition of an intelligent, beautiful, and radical journalist named Natalie (Marisa Tomei) to the mix only makes Houser's job tougher.
